Duel

The following excerpts were taken from the Olympian Springs Boarder. They were written by C.R. Staples and appeared on page 976.953. They were not to be published until the death of Staples (for obvious reasons).

A BRIEF HISTORY OF BATH AND MENIFEE COUNTY FEUDS OF SEVERAL YEAR'S STANDING BY AN OLYMPIAN SPRINGS BOARDER

Old Enoch Pergrem shot and killed Tom Clark in cold blood years ago and was never prosecuted because the witnesses were afraid to swear against him. Old Man Ike Lowe was standing nearby and saw Mr. Clark trying to crawl through the crowd on his hands and knees to keep old Enoch from seeing him. Enoch would hunt him up and shoot him in the back. Mr. Lowe saw the dust fly from his coat every time he would shoot. Mr. Lowe immediately left for Maysville to keep from being a witness and being killed if he swore the truth. Pergrem was considered a man of great physic and great courage and was always armed to the teeth. The man was very broad across the shoulders and felt his keep in but when he would meet another man of his size would walk up, shake him and warn him in a friendly way what he would do for him if he ever got into a fight with him. Consequently, everybody was afraid of him and as he always came on like a lion when infuriated he fought many duels in his time with the McCarty's, Denny's and the Moore's. He always carried his fighting clothes with him --a hip cloth, shoes with spikes, a razor and a dagger - the former so that he would have his head shaved and read in a moment's notice for any emergencies that came up with practicing his profession as a champion duel fighter of the world.

A man by the name of Oakley took dinner with a Mr. Harris T. J. Pergrem accosted him in a few days and wanted to know why he did it. Mr. Oakley replied, "It is none of your business". Jess Smith, a good citizen and a Christian gentleman of the county expressed himself at his table one day in the presence of a news carrier, that he did not believe that Cleveland had left the county. The Pergrems got hold of it and shortly afterward Mr. Smith was sitting in the depot with his family when he was approached by Jim Pergrem, a brother of Big Marshall and was told he had been talking too much. Mr. Smith wanted to know what it was. He told him and Jess said, "I said it Mr. Pergrem but it was mostly to my family at the table and I didn't mean a bit of harm. Mr. Pergrem replied, "Keep your damn mouth shut or you will get your brains browed out. Mr. Smith hasn't opened his mouth yet.

Dropping back to the pitched battles and duel fighting again we might add that the greatest duel ever fought in Olympia was between the Pergrems on one side and the Ledfords on the other.

With the end of the Revolutionary War settlers began filtering through the mountain gaps in the Alleghenies and down the tributary rivers to settle Kentucky and the Ohio country. The Northwest Ordinance adopted by the Continental Congress in 1787 to provide for the organization of the Ohio Country assured the Indians that their land and property would be inviolate by the population pressure in the East steadily increased the flow of westward migration. The settlers viewed the Indians as nomads, casual and impermanent occupiers of the land who had no real concept of ownership or means of recording or transferring title to land.

The early 1800's in Western Kentucky and what is now Indiana, required resourceful, self-reliant, and courageous pioneers. The frontier held little attraction for the wealthy or those of social distinction, but new land was cheap, easy to obtain, and a strong inducement to many farmers who had worn out the soil of their farms in the seaboard states east of the Appalachian system. Public land sold for $2.00 an acre in 320 acre lots on the Ohio frontier and payment could be made annually over a period of four years. By 1810 there were 24,520 people inhabiting the Indian Territory. Conditions were hazardous for the first settlers. Forests had to be cleared, Indian uprisings, sickness and epidemics dealt with. The settling of the country was held partially in check by the Indians, but their power was weakened by the War of 1812. Thereafter, their resistance was broken and the great land rush was on. Indiana joined the Union in 1816 as a slave free state. By 1820 it numbered 147,178 inhabitants. Its growth was fueled by the new land laws of 1820 which allowed the purchase of a trace of land as small as 80 acres at $1.25 an acre.

TRIBUTE TO KENTUCKY

Kentucky, a beautiful, mysteriously romantic, and beloved section of land situated in the Mississippi Valley, the heart of the U. S. A. Bounded by two great rivers; the Ohio and the Mississippi, and traversed by two rivers of equal economic importance and beauty; the Kentucky and the Cumberland.

Kentucky, a land of stream-bound meadows and majestic mountains; a land of underground rivers which created numerous caves of great size and beauty; a land of virgin hardwood forests and beautiful river valleys.

A rich productive limestone country which teemed with wild life and luxuriant vegetation. Loved by the wild beast of forests and field because of the many salt lick and bountiful food supply.

A land loved and desired equally by the Indian and the white man. A love so great that both races paid dearly in lives lost, and battles fought for the possession of it.

Many are the tales of heroism, courage, and endurance that are handed down to us. The souls of men had to be noble, strong and hardy in those bygone days. Well may we ask ourselves, have we been worthy of the great sacrifices they made for the land they loved.

Kentucky, a wondrous heritage, may we ever be mindful of the debt that we owe our ancestors and keep their memory sacred by preserving the records of their valiant lives for future generations.

Kentucky, a sacred and hallowed land, a land truly favored by the Great Spirit of the Indian and the God of the White man.

May the present generation of Kentuckians cease to rest upon the laurels of the past. May they awaken from their present state of happy contentment and self satisfaction, to a realization that there is still a need of honesty and integrity to fight for the right because it is right. Still a need for men of vision and insight to make of Kentucky the same great state that it was and shall continue to be.

Jamima Smith married in 1756 to Joseph Porter. He was the great great grandson of the distinguished colonial governor of Maryland Viz the Honorable Leonard Calvert (1610-1647) and he was also the the great great grandson of the Honorable William Stone (1603-1660).

Jamima married a second time to Mr. Edrington, widower and then married a third time to Hawkins Stone, widower son of Barton Stone who moved from Charles Co., Md. to Stafford Co., Va. around 1779. Hawkins was the great great grandson of Governor William Stone.

Jamima had a daughter Sarah Porter (1769-1816) who married William Barton Stone (1757-1793) son of Barton Stone and Sarah Speake. Sarah then married a second time to John Catesby Edrington (1775-1820), son of Mr. Edrington and his first wife.

Thus the first husband of Sarah Porter was the younger brother of her mother's third husband and her second husband was the son of her mother's second husband.

To further complicate the genealogy situation, her son Capt. John Catesby Edrington, Jr (1800-1879) married Elizabeth Hawkins Stone (1810-1891) daughter of the above Hawkins Stone (1748-1810) and his third wife Elizabeth Burroughs daughter of Captain George B. Burroughs.

I'd like to see you put this one on your chart!

Jesse Underwood assures me that our family is related to Jamima Smith in some way. She wouldn't go into any detail about the relationship. After reading this about Jamima, I'm not sure I want to know the relationship out of fear that she might really be my daughter or some other close relative.

Death of the Heiress

The following story refers to Marjorie Jackson who was related to Kate Sponcil Smith (wife of Steven Douglas Smith). Furman Jackson son of Tom Jackson, at one time was also interested in Lillie Smith. Jesse Underwood has a card written in 1912 that was sent to Lillie from Furman saying that she was the prettiest of all the lilies in the valley.

Also people at one time before Maggie Smith (sister of Lillie) was married, had her married to Stanley Jackson a brother of Stanley Jackson and also son of Tom Jackson. The reply that Maggie had when she found out what was being said was "Well where are we going to live?".

Defense presents short case in trial for heiress' murder

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — The defense took less than an hour yesterday in presenting its case in the multimillion-dollar robbery and murder of an heiress, calling four witnesses to try to discredit earlier testimony.

Final arguments in the trial of Manuel Lee Robinson, 30, of Indianapolis, are expected tomorrow, and jury deliberations are expected to begin tomorrow evening. Robinson is charged with murder, robbery, arson and conspiracy.

Defense attorney Arnold Baratz said he tried to discredit testimony given by Marjorie Pollitt, who testified that Robinson told her he fatally shot Marjorie Jackson three days before the heiress body was found by firefighters in her northern Indianapolis home May 7, 1977. Authorities found about $5 million hidden throughout the home and estimated that another $3.5 million was stolen.

Mrs. Pollitt is serving a federal prison sentence for interstate transportation of stolen money, and her ex-husband, Howard Willett, was convicted last December on the same charges Robinson now faces and is serving a life prison term.

From fur to feathers, widow's goods sold

By GORDON ENGLEHART
Courier-Journal Staff Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — They auctioned off almost all of Marjorie Jackson's earthly goods yesterday.

Her two Cadillacs. Mink coats. Jewelry. A tiny portable burglar alarm. Clothing and household appliances. The feathers of her dead pet parrot.

But not her gold-inlaid false teeth.

Francis Feeney, attorney for the estate of the slain grocery-chain heiress, disclosed that he got a $200,000 bill several days ago from a dentist for "dental work" for Mrs. Jackson.

Feeney retrieved the partial plate from Earl's Auction Barn here as possible evidence in a possible lawsuit over the claim.

Asked why Mrs. Jackson was not wearing the plate when buried, Feeney said he did not know.

Mrs. Jackson, 66, was found shot to death in her fire-ravaged home here May 7. Police discovered about $5 million stashed around the house, and said they believed that $3 million to $6 million more had been stolen. Six people have been arrested in the case.

The well publicized auction of the belongings of Mrs. Jackson and her mother, Mrs. Clara O'Connell, drew buyers and the curious from as far away as California, Texas, New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

In the cold, steady rain, the crowd started moving into a big tent outside the Auction Barn at 6 a.m. The tent rented for $600 and held 600 seats. About 1,000 persons were on hand when the sale started at 10:30 a.m.

"Here we go," said brass-lunged auctioneer Earl Cornwell, standing on a platform between the building and the tent, his seersucker suit quickly sopping up rain.

The first item, a small chest, sold for $27.50.

Helpers hauled out table after table heaped with items:

Thirty pairs of children's pajamas (Mrs. Jackson was childless); stacks of towels; unused clothing still bearing price tags; books (including 50 Bibles); music ("100 Best Songs of the '20's and '30's"); umbrellas; china; silverware; knickknacks. Sales were brisk.

"Most of them are buying this stuff for souvenirs, just to say they got something of Mrs. Jackson's," said Marion County Police Sgt. Lawrence E. McLaughlin.

He was one of six officers on guard duty.

Water pouring off his face, Cornwell heaped a pile of loose clothing into a helper's arms, and growled:

"I've never seen one like this. Three more years and I'm going to write a damn book."

Every now and then, Cornwell would interrupt one of his assistant auctioneers and shout:

"Hey, John, here's another one of them money drawers."

These were plain dresser drawers, in which police reportedly had turned up some of the millions.

The first sold for $11. The second went to Mrs. Eunice Gibson, an elderly woman from Brownsburg, for $35.

"It was one of those stupid impulses that hit us once in a lifetime," she explained. "This is the one they found the $2 million in — one of the auctioneers told me.

"I've been so terribly sorry for the dear lady . . . we should all fantasize once in a while, and wonder what's around the bend . . ."

Newspaper article about the auction after Mrs. Jackson's death.

Appendix

At one point, as Cornwell chanted his ritual gibberish, two brassieres and a pair of silk stockings, dropped by helpers, lay forlornly in puddles on the platform.

Eight panels of Oriental room dividers sold for $525. Mrs. Jackson's palm-sized burglar alarm, which sells for perhaps $7.50 retail, was snapped up for $22.50.

The rain tapered off about 1 p.m., and at 1:30 sharp came the main event — sale of Mrs. Jackson's two 1976 Cadillac Seville cars. The yellow one had 44 miles on it, and the metallic gold one 2,610.

Cornwell waved a voucher listing their retail price at $13,677.

The yellow quickly sold for $14,000. Reporters crowded around the buyer, Harold Smith, who described himself as retired.

"Congratulations," a woman TV reporter gushed to Smith.

"Thank you very much, replied Smith beaming as if he had just pitched a no-hitter and received an admiring phone call from the President.

"I wanted one all my life," Smith asserted. "Actually, I wanted a Mercedes Benz, but I'll settle for this."

The gold car was bought for $12,000 by Charlene Hodgin, who pulled 14 folded $100 bills from a blouse pocket in making the $1,200 down payment. (The rest must be paid in two days.)

Mrs. Hodgin, who said her husband Richard is an Indianapolis attorney, allowed that she would keep the car in her garage. Why? a reporter demanded.

"Because it belonged to the lady that got murdered," Mrs. Hodgin said. "I want it as a souvenir."

Then she relented a bit. She said her husband had given permission to buy the car, and she would let him drive it.

With refrigerators, the stove, fans, and furniture out of the way, Cornwell dispatched 15 fine Oriental rugs and four full-length mink coats plus other mink items.

One coat sold for $1,300 after Cornwell assured the crowd:

"June (his wife) and I have handled all her clothes, and that lady didn't buy nothing cheap."

Next up was two shelves of jewelry in a glass case — plus the feathers of Boyd, Mrs. Jackson's prized pet parrot who died in 1967, reportedly at age 35.

One bunch of feathers drew $15, and two others $7.50 each.

A pastel painting of Boyd was snapped up for $22.50, while another animal lover forked over $17.50 for a paperweight with Boyd's picture in it.

David (Lucky) Williams, a veteran helper for Cornwell, best summed up the attraction of the daylong sale, during the rapid sale of the two cars.

"It's like Jesse James' gun," he said. "They manufactured a lot of guns like his. But there's only one Jesse James gun. And there's only one Jackson Cadillac. There's only one time they're going to get it, and that's here."

Many hope freed inmate heads for missing cash

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — When Manuel Lee Robinson is released from the Indiana Reformatory next month, he could become a millionaire — at least temporarily.

"The day he walks out of prison there are going to be 100 pairs of eyes following him," joked Vaughn C. Overstreet, administrative assistant for the state Department of Correction.

The reason is that as much as $3 million stolen from Marjorie Jackson when she was murdered in May 1977 has never been recovered. Officials believe Robinson, convicted of burglary and arson in the case, may know where the money is.

Jackson was believed to have up to $11 million in her house. Police estimated that $4 million was stolen, but some speculate that the total was closer to $6 million. About $3 million was recovered, some of it dug up in the Arizona desert.

Robinson has never said whether he knows where the cash is, Hicks said. If the money is found, it belongs to Jackson's estate, according to Marion County Prosecutor Stephen Goldsmith and Attorney General Linley E. Pearson.

Robinson and Howard R. Willard were accused of breaking into Jackson's Indianapolis home May 2, 1977, and taking at least $1 million in cash. They allegedly returned two days later to steal at least $3 million more, investigators said. On that visit, Jackson was fatally shot, and the house was burned.

Willard and Robinson were arrested within a month. Officials at an Indianapolis car dealership became suspicious and called police after the men paid cash for several luxury sedans.

Willard was convicted of murder, burglary and arson. He died in the reformatory June 27, 1987.

Robinson, 40, will be released May 15 because he has completed his sentence. He was sentenced to two to 14 years on each of three counts of conspiracy to commit a felony, 10 to 20 years on each of two charges of burglary, and five to 20 years for arson.

By the Name of Smith

One of the Largest of the Human Families

WHENEVER SCIONS of families bearing very aristocratic names find themselves in dubious situations which require them to hide their real identity under an alias, they invariably select the name of Smith. This is due to the fact that the name is one most generally known and consequently not so liable to attract attention. Even King Louis Philippe of France found it a convenient alias when he abdicated his throne and fled for his life. Yet the Smith families have produced great and distinguished leaders in art, literature and statesmanship, and they can point to a genealogical and historic heritage not equalled by many families bearing less common patronomics.

The generally accepted derivation of the name is that the Smiths were the first workers in iron, and because of their skill they adopted the name of their trade, or calling, as a surname. This is not accurate, though if it were so, it would be no mean compliment to their origin. Among feudal clans the smith ranked in dignity to the chief, for his skill in forging military weapons, and his dexterity in teaching the use of them, was a calling of the highest importance in those ancient days. The fact is, however, that the name Smith is derived from the Anglo-Saxon Smitan, meaning to smite.

American Smiths

pany in Pennsylvania. This family has produced many governors of states; Benjamin Smith, aide to Washington, was the governor of North Carolina, and he donated 20,000 acres to the University of the state. William Smith, born in 1796, was governor of Virginia. Thomas Smith was colonial governor of South Carolina in 1648. James Smith, born in 1809, was governor of Rhode Island, and another James Smith, born in 1823, was governor of Georgia. Alfred E. Smith was four times governor of New York and Democratic candidate for the Presidency.
